
Pol Arch Intern Med. 2018; 128: 706-708. doi: 10.20452/pamw.4353

Please note that the journal is not responsible for the scientific accuracy or functionality of any supplementary material submitted by the authors. Any queries (except missing content) should be directed to the corresponding author of the article.
(1, 2) Histopathological specimen form the skin lump. (1) Positive immunohistochemical reaction to CD138, × 400. (2) Negative immunohistochemical reaction to κ light chains, × 400.